Presentation.

Presentation.

On Saturday evening a presentation of a splendid gold-headed Cane to Geo. J. arnold, Esq., manager of the Louise Weils Troupe, took place at the National Theater.

The cane was presented on behalf of the donors by Nathan Neabit, Esq., as follows:

Sir. A few citizens of Cincinnati, desirous of expressing their admiration of your services in the came of the drama, have determined, upon the eve of your departure, to present you with a slight token of their esteem; and I have been unexpectedly chosen as the medium through which that presentation shall take place. They have witnessed, sir, with pleasure, your professional career, and hardly know which most to appreciate, your character as an actor, or as a man. Had we more anyone on the stage, Thearired managers would not complain of empty treasuries. Accept, sir, this testimonial, and when fag distant, may you occasionally pause in the midst of your professional triumphs and think of your friends in the "Quesn City of the West," and when old age "has crept on space," and you have retired from participation in the active duties of life, may it support your tottering footsteps, until at length you shall be called upon to pass through the "durk valley of the shadw of death," to the realms of a glorious immortality. Loud applause.

Mr. Arnold, in receiving the cane, said:

Siz.—For this munificent gift from my friends, accept my thanks. I perceive by the inscription it is given by John Bates, Boman & Tieman, John Watson and —. To John Bates, the honored proprietor of this theater, I am under many and great obligations for various acts of kindness. I have allways found him a gentleman in the true acceptation of the word. Boman & Tieman, John Watson, I would say to the travellog public, if they desire the best of accommodations, they have only to call upon "mine host" of the United States Hotel, and they will be abundantly satisfied. But there is another name engrayed here when I honer-and expect, and although not in the sense generally understood, yet th labors.

And now, ladies and gentlemen of the audience, I would return you my sincere and heartfelt thanks for your kind and generous support during our engagement, and believe me I will ever remember with feelings of pleasure the patrons of the "Old Drury" of the "Queen City." Farewell.

Mr. Arnold retired amidst the most vociforous applause.

THE FIRES IN THE NEW-JESSEY PINES.— We clip the following from the Philadelphia

"A news item, copied into our columns from ne of our Jersey exchanges, has mentioned the large wood fire in Burlington County, N J. From a friend we learn that the conflagration, which approached Medford, destroyed the timber covering about 15,000 acres of pine land, owned by Wm. Braddock and others. Mr. Braddock's loss, alone, amounted to $10,000. At Snyder's mills, where the flames encountered a large pond of water, it was supposed that the destroyed posed that the destruction would be arrested, out a high wind prevailing, the fire crossed the pond, and caught in the buildings, fences, &c so that the people narrowly escaped with their lives. The fire commenced near Pendleton, where a colored man was burning brush-heaps, a common but very dangerous practice in wild lands. Many farmers suffered the loss of fences and other property, and the neighboring crops were injured."

THE ARTESIAN WELL .- This "great institution" will shortly have increased attraction. On Saturday we saw, at the Market street foundry, a large and beautiful fountain, which is nearly completed in Mr. Snead's best style, and which will be set up, and in operation by the Artesian well in a few days. This will be another charming feature in connection with the wonderful well, and when the Artesian Baths are in full "work ing trim," but few citizens or strangers will fail to visit them and enjoy their luxuries

The Mesers. Dupont, although but a few years in Louisville, and comparative strangers, are destined to rank high as men of enterprise and public benefactors, and centuries hence, when new generations shall look upon the no ble jet of water that is there forced up from the mysterious depths of the earth, their names will be associated with it as having largely contributed to the health, the comfort, and the luxuries by which they are surrounded.

CONTRACT FOR SURVEYS .- One of the last official acts of Col. Charles E. Mix, as Commissioner of Indian Affairs ad interim, was the conclusion on the 12th inst., of an agreement with C.H. Snow and Henry Hutton for the survey of the Southern boundary of the lands granted to the Mendanakanton, Wahpakoota, Sisseston and Wahpaton bands of the Sioux Indians by the treaties of the 23d July and 8th day of August, 1851, and also the exterior boundaries of the Yankton reservation, and the red pipe stone quarry reserve granted the Yankton Indians by the treaty of the 19th of April, 1858. The amount to be paid for the surveys mentioned is $4,000, and they are to be completed, and plats, &c., forwarded to the General Land Office by the 1st day of October, 1859.—Constitution.

Six persons were sersously poisoned at West Winsted, Conn., on Thursday last. It seems that a gentleman and his wife called upon a family by the name of Wakefield, and stail family by the name of washield, and state to tea, and that in wetting up some biscuit for the toa-table, by mutake, arsenic was used instead of cream of tartar. All the family, together with the visitors, partook freely of the hot biscuit, and were dangerously poisoned. On Tuesday last all were recovering. Mrs. Wakefield's case was the worst, but it was thought that she would recover.
